

Buying A Domain Name | Welcome

Buying the perfect domain name

The first step in establishing an online presence is buying a domain name. A domain name works as an introduction to your web portal. Whether your website is a blog, a business front or some other service, the domain name is an important part in the race for higher visitor hits.

The domain name should be chosen according to the objective of your proposed online presence. In case of a business, it should ideally contain the name of the company or organization or at least give reference to the type of product or service involved. The domain name should be easy to remember, intuitive and above all, relevant. Another thing to look out for while buying a domain name is choosing the appropriate suffix. These suffixes are of many types including common ones such as .com, .net and .org. there are also many other types available that pertain to a wide array of different categories. In short, you are sure to find a domain name that best suits your purpose.

Pricing of domain names varies depending on the type. Common domain names of the .com and .org variety might sell for about $8 to $15. More personalized versions might be available for somewhere around the twenty dollar mark. There is a lot of competition between domain registrars and websites so if you search intelligently enough, a good bargain shouldn't be hard to strike. The price you get will ultimately depend on the kind of domain you are after. For example, domain names with country extensions can cost a whole lot more than generic ones. So that makes it all the more important to decide what type of domain name your website requires so that the money you spend does not go to waste.

You can save money while buying a domain name by searching for relevant names that are already registered. Although this requires some hard work, at the end of the day you are guaranteed to have a suitable domain name at a fraction of a new one's cost.

There are certain things that have to be considered if you buy a domain name that has been registered previously. One of the most important is to check whether the name contains the trademark of some other company or organization. Checking this prior to buying will ensure you do not run into problems later. It is also a good idea to use a search engine to see what kind of sites have been associated with the domain name in the past. By viewing its history, you can make sure whether the domain name is the right fit for you.

Finally, remember that price should not be the sole factor on which you base your decision. Buying a domain name is a crucial task because the name can lead to problems down the line. Hence always buy from accredited registrars and trusted companies. Read all rules and regulations specially those pertaining to usage policy and pricing. Compare different options to make an informed decision.

Choosing your domain name.

Buying A Domain Name

Written by Administrator

Friday, 27 November 2009 15:17 - Last Updated Friday, 28 January 2011 11:49

If you are buying a domain name then you need to make sure that you buy the right one. If your domain name is to advertise your business then you should do some research and maybe take some advice from a specialist as this domain name is how your business will be known online. The name you choose should reflect the goods or services that you offer.